Fake News!

Editor:

Mr. Richard Salzman quotes an article from the HSU publication, The Lum-berjack, Sept. 19, citing it as evidence of the dangers of campus life. I found this alarming as I have a son soon to join that honored institution. After looking up the article online and perusing it, I realized that Mr. Salzman was either misquoting the article or misinterpreted the information as its main gist is the administration is shortening the broadcast hours of live entertainment.

Ironically, this particular issue that contains this letter (Mailbox, Oct. 4), has as its cover story "The Real Fight Against Fake News."

Michael Mathe, Colfax

Editor:

Thank you, thank you, thank you for your superb presentation of the troubling issues that seldom reach our poorly informed citizenship ("The Real Fight Against Fake News," Oct. 4) by Paul Rosenberg. It underscores the real value of the NCJ and allows concerned people access we seldom have the time or energy to ferret out on our own.

America must wake up.

Larry Hourany, McKinleyville

Reasonable Minds

Editor:

I have read to two letters regarding Humboldt becoming a sanctuary county, one for and the other against (Mailbox," Oct. 11). The one opposed gave facts, but threw in some emotions, too. The one for sanctuary began with a letter addressed to a friend of and friend, which by the way was anonymous. Sounds like the New York Times. This letter berated anyone supporting sanctuary as a traitor, evil, etc. I was not impressed. Then the pro sanctuary writer began his own rant calling those who don't agree with him evil, racist, etc. Sounded like the same person wrote both pieces. Both used emotions, demonizing and name calling to push their program.

I am surprised that the Journal would print letters like that. I need facts to decide how to cast my vote, not raw emotions that give little or no information. This Hispanic man has not decided on how to vote yet. But I can tell you for sure that letters like the ones presented will do little to influence my vote.

Is it possible that someone who doesn't agree with you is not evil, but just has a different opinion?

Eric Cortez, Eureka

Keep it Clean

Editor:

Amazingly, roughly three and a-half years have passed since we moved to Trinidad after years of visiting the area and falling in love with the beauty of the Trinidad Bay and coastal landscapes: the rough coastline, challenging trails, dynamic beaches and panoramic vista points inviting exploration.

Impressed with the Trinidad Coastal Land Trust's (TCLT) commitment to preserving coastal public access, we have joined its volunteer base on a couple of cleanup days of trust-managed vista points and beach trails along Scenic Drive ("Beach by Beach," Sept. 6).

We have been stunned and saddened to see the thoughtless littering of household garbage, trashy transient camp waste, drug trash ... you name it, along the coastline. Cleanups completed by TCLT volunteers along with organizations such as PAC-OUT are frequently held in the summer months and result in the collection of heaps of garbage during each cleanup along Trinidad's Scenic Drive. Unfortunately, we see similar dumping in other areas as well.

This dumping affects open spaces and private properties, as well as those who come to enjoy our coastal natural amenities, including families with young children. We all can make a difference by helping with cleanup and by reporting dumping to the county sheriff. Let's all work to preserve our unparalleled coastal landscape and keep it clean. (For information on Trinidad coastal cleanup dates, visit www.TrinidadCoastal-LandTrust.org).

Vote Incumbents, Castellano, Seaman!

Editor:

Influencing a corrupt developer in the White House begins by reining in his base of corrupt developers at home. Using local government to facilitate participation in recurring boom-and-bust housing fraud has caused an epidemic of foreclosures, bankruptcies and homelessness.

Voters can ensure Eureka continues reversing this legacy in November by electing Leslie Castellano and all Eureka city council incumbents who courageously ended millions of public dollars subsidizing the chamber of commerce while passing a human rights resolution and an apology to Native people amid resurgent racism, misogyny and corruption.

Also, Susan Seaman's financial and public service background is exactly what Eureka needs in replacing a mayor facing investigation by the Department of Justice. Susan worked with the Arcata Economic Development Corporation, the only local financial institution to offer my family a business loan. Thanks to AEDC, Eureka has another business that remains successful for more than 25 years.

George Clark, Eureka

She is the leader to remind us that we will be OK ... not without work, but with vision and energy. As mayor, Susan Seaman will be a positive voice.

Please vote Seaman for mayor.

Vote Watson!

Editor:

I am writing to encourage you to vote for Brett Watson. I have known Brett for two years (I have only lived in the area for three). I know he is extremely hard working and is very involved in our community.

What I really admire about Brett is he is very responsive to any questions I have. He listens carefully and tries to understand all sides of an issue. Brett will help to diversify our local economy and work for more living wage jobs. He wants to expand safe and affordable housing for Arcata, create a dog park and enhance the safety and beauty of Valley West and the plaza.

Also, he would work to make Arcata a zero-waste city as well as increase our disaster preparedness. I hope you will join me in voting for Brett Watson for Arcata City Council.

Mary Lou Lowry, Arcata

Vote Castellano!

Editor:

The city council promotes Eureka's recognition as a premier arts destination. It's time to acknowledge how important the arts are to the our cultural, social and economic fabric — with a working artist sitting on the council.

Ask anyone making a living from their own art: It might look like all fun and inspiration but it's more often about dedication, serious work and balancing a shoestring budget. Leslie Castellano has worn every hat possible in Eureka's art scene these past two decades — performing, teaching, opening and maintaining Synopsis art space, working with Eureka's teens and special needs artists, hosting plays, dance, visual exhibits, lectures and physical art — while managing grants, public relations, leases, budgets and bureaucratic minutia.

Years ago Eureka missed the opportunity to elect Ink People founder Libby Maynard to the city council. Don't miss the opportunity now. Vote for Leslie Castellano's optimism, dedication and creativity.

Alan Sanborn, Arcata

No on K!

Editor:

Measure K markedly lowers the safety for our law enforcement, citizens, family members and friends and creates dangerous situations for county officials and ICE in removing illegals/criminals. How many more citizens need to be victimized before we say enough?

Our own Sheriff Honsal stated a need to keep "serious and violent" felons out of the county. Most of the drugs that have entered the county, he said, have arrived from Mexico. "I want these (drug dealers) deported," he said. "This ordinance is taking away these tools that I have" and need.

Don't fall for the "breaking up families" spiel; that happens when families knowingly cross our borders illegally. What K does do is provide a "safe house" for criminals/illegals. This measure is backed and created by the no ICE, no borders, no U.S. gang.

Vote no on Measure K to save our county.

Rick Brennan, Eureka

Vote Seaman!

Editor:

Susan Seaman, 27-year resident of Eureka, moves projects forward. "Youth, families, community, investment, prosperity" are themes that describe Susan. When she sees a spark of initiative, she keeps the flame burning in our small and large businesses. She knows that good work leads to healthy families and community. Susan sees the connections. What is good for Eureka is good for the region.

Eureka is on a crossroads, literally and figuratively. The city council and staff work daily to make sure we visit the bay, the architectural richness of the neighborhoods and explore the diversity of the arts.

Susan has the experience and connections to lead on this exciting path to greater prosperity and self-confidence.

community member who brings people together. His history working with unions and organizing community activities like softball leagues show his commitment to civic action.

I am most impressed by Richard's dogged determination as a harbor commissioner to protect our precious Humboldt Bay. For me the importance of a clean and healthy bay to our daily quality of life cannot be over stated. Richard's leadership to resolve the disastrous situation of the abandoned pulp mill shows his commitment to the bay's future. As someone who witnessed the deplorable condition of the rusting tanks, I can confidently say we all live in a safer, healthier and more prosperous community now that the toxic liquids no longer sit next to the bay.

Vote Richard Marks for harbor commissioner.

John St. Marie, Arcata

No on M!

Editor:

The Philippine-American War initiated by President McKinley with his annexation of the Philippines was a "model" for the later war in Vietnam.

This included the massacre of civilians, the burning of crops and killing of farm animals, the herding of civilians into "detention camps," the designation of certain areas where anyone could be killed (later in Vietnam called "freefire" zones) and the systematic use of torture. The Philippine-American War and insurrection lasted from 1899 to 1913 and the estimates of Filipinos killed range from 500,000 to 1.4 million.

In November of 1901, the Manila correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger reported: "Our men have been relentless, have killed to exterminate men, women, children, prisoners and captives, active insurgents and suspected people from lads of 10 up, the idea prevailing that the Filipino as such was little better than a dog."

Please vote no on Measure M.

Robert J. Hepburn, Arcata

Editor:

Arcata voters choose Nov. 6: 1, Acknowledge history, beginning about 170 years ago, of humans armed with guns coming hundreds of miles from the east to invade land occupied by other humans for tens of thousands of years – and give respect to descendants of the original human inhabitants by voting no on Measure M; or 2, Hold onto the comfortable history crafted by the invading humans and their descendants to justify rape, murder, massacre, enslavement and natural resource destruction for individual short-term gain – and reject the Wiyot People's request and the Arcata City Council's vote to remove the McKinley statue from the plaza.

I urge Arcata voters to respect our neighbors, Wiyot and other indigenous peoples, and to commit an act of inclusion by voting no on Measure M.

Diane Ryerson, Arcata

In-N-Out in the Planning

Fast food favorite may be coming to Eureka

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill

jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

Like an online dating match leaving breadcrumb text messages, In-N-Out Burger periodically lets us know it's interested in coming to Humboldt County. Someday. Maybe. And every time, die-hard fans of off-the-menu ordering get worked up only to be put off again. Let's keep in touch!

Things are looking decidedly more committed since The Carrington Co. submitted plans for a four-tenant structure on the coastal side of Broadway near Vigo Street to the Eureka Planning Department with an In-N-Out on the corner of the site. (Calls to The Carrington Co. were not returned.)

"They have definitely submitted permits, so that means they are very invested in the project ... there's still a lot to sort out," says Planning Department Director Robert Holmlund. "We're working with them on the project to make sure it's as good as it can be for the community." That work includes nailing down a coastal development permit, a conditional use permit and a California Environmental Quality Act mitigated negative impact declaration, which touches on traffic, aesthetics, air quality and other issues. The proposal is tentatively scheduled to go before the planning commission Dec. 10.

But is In-N-Out Burger really into us? The folks at corporate headquarters remain cautious about a timeline for a yet unapproved project. In an email to the Journal, Vice President of Development at In-N-Out Burger Carl Arena wrote, "We do hope to open a restaurant in Eureka in the future. That said, it is still very early in the development application process so design elements such as building layouts, site circulation and access are still evolving." He goes on to say, "Once we begin construction on a new location, it usually takes us four to five months to build a restaurant and open for business. However, there is still quite a bit of work to be done before we can even set a time to begin construction. Because it is still so early in the process, it would be premature to comment on a timeline or if we will even achieve a development approval."

The burger chain isn't a franchise anybody can buy into — instead it's run by the Snyder family. And if the Bible references on the cups (a simple "John 3:16,"

The company's political donations sparked some controversy this summer when its $25,000 contribution to the Republican Party in California became public. (The company also donated $50,000 to a political action committee that supports moderate Democrats.)

In a New York Times article, Arnie Wensinger, the burger chain's vice president was quoted as saying, "While it is unfortunate that our contributions to support both political parties in California has caused concern with some groups, we believe that bipartisan support is a fair and consistent approach that best serves the interests of our company and all of our customers." Whether those donations affect who's in or out among the Humboldt customer base remains to be seen. ●

Local fishermen are on the verge of forever losing local fishing grounds to wind power as California trades one renewable resource (seafood) for another (electricity). The state of California and its citizens are on the front line of the efforts to convert our energy use from the burning of fossil fuels (oil and gas) to renewable sources of power — solar and wind. The latest move toward this conversion is for the sale of offshore ocean leases to wind power companies for the development of “at sea” wind farms with the ocean area off of Eureka and Trinidad as the prime first sites.

Disclaimer

Many people are convinced that the changes to Earth's climate are related to the human-caused release of carbon dioxide. Please include fishermen in this category. Worldwide, fishermen are dealing directly with the effects of oceanic climate shifts with the California ocean being no exception. Massive kelp die-offs due to warmer water temperatures in Northern California have led to the curtailment of abalone and sea urchin fishing. Major algal blooms responsible for domoic acid in crabs, clams, lobsters and some forage fish have resulted in fishery closures and months-long delays in season openers. A warm water “blob” in the eastern temperate Pacific led to major changes in spatial “distribution and abundance” of five species of salmon, Albacore tuna, mid-water fish such as hake, and significant impacts to ocean productivity. Fishermen understand this. All that being said, West Coast fishermen have huge concerns about the permanent impacts of wind power on their ability to provide local seafood. Fishermen are not opposed to clean renewable energy but they are opposed to the permanent loss of valuable fishing grounds heading their way.

The Boundless Ocean

Standing on the beach and looking out to sea, the ocean seems limitless. It is not. Besides nature's established boundaries of shoreline, depth and seabed topography, there are variations temperature, currents, areas of biological productivity, water quality and color. Then there are human established rules, designated areas and uses. California has the most regulated ocean and fishing industry in the world. If you took a felt pen and blackened all the areas in California's coastal ocean where there is a fishing closure, marine protected area, national sanctuary, cable lane, traffic separation scheme, national park, gear, depth or species fishing restriction, the entire map off California's coast would be black. Please add to this solid black map of California's ocean an additional layer of pigment in the form of offshore oil, gas, mineral, wind and wave energy lease tracts brought to you by the federal Bureau of Ocean Energy Management. These folks decide where and when offshore leasing will take place. While they continually insist that they do not regulate fishing activities, they do — by default when offshore leases are centered on prime fishing grounds.

On the Receiving End

The entire fishing community and significant portions of Humboldt County's local business will be on the receiving end of the negative impacts to the fishing fleet from offshore wind power. It works like this: The coastal ocean is basically 100 percent utilized by fishermen employing various types of fishing gear targeting a wide range of fish species as seasons change throughout the year. Displacing (evicting) a group of fishermen from one area doesn't only affect those individuals and boats — everybody else has to move or adjust as the boats displaced by offshore energy try to squeeze into the remaining fishing grounds. This domino effect starts in the fishing grounds and continues right into harbor.

This problem is understated when the public reads the initial public relations concerning these offshore projects. Here in town, the first proposal for offshore wind was for one turbine as a prototype. A few months later, it was three to five turbines, and lately the number has jumped to about 17 turbines. The developers report each turbine “only” takes 1 square mile of seabed for its anchoring footprint. OK, so far, 17 square miles for 17 turbines. But wait — one needs to read the fine print in BOEM's ocean leasing policy. The bureau only leases ocean blocks in 9 square mile areas so — potentially 17 turbines could remove 17 to 153 square miles of fishing grounds, except that offshore energy leases tend to be much larger than the actual footprint of the initially proposed project. However, not all turbines can be sited in one block or in a single row due to ocean bed topography and prevailing wind direction and some may need to be relocated at a later date for optimal results. On top of that, wind power companies will require a "submarine cable transit lane" from the turbine site to the beach. On the ocean surface they also need a wide transit lane for maintenance vessels and multiple tow boats to bring turbines to and from our harbor. All of these areas are to be off limits to bottom contact and fixed bottom fishing gear, like crab pots, ground fish trawls and hook and line fishing gear.

Back at the turbine site, the anchoring and cable system areas are strictly off limits to traditional fishing. Wind power companies do not want fishermen's gear entangled in their anchors and no fishing gear is a match for the massive equipment attempting to hold these turbines in place.

"We Know Where You Live"

What may prove to be local commercial fishermen's only hope is Redwood Coast Energy Authority, the local leader in our community's energy sources. The RCEA board of directors, Executive Director Matthew Marshall and their staff all live here and have, much to their credit, invited participation of local fishermen, starting with preliminary wind power discussion, evaluation of qualifications of wind power companies and in depth conversations to understand impacts to our fishing community. Humboldt Fishermen's Marketing Association President Harrison Ibach and Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen's Associations Director Noah Oppenheim have worked with Marshall in the drafting and adoption of a memorandum of understanding to work together to minimize and mitigate wind power impacts to our fishing community. The marketing association board of directors were reluctant signers to this memorandum. This reluctance stems from watching East Coast fishermen thrown under the proverbial bus by wind power and BOEM, concerns that working with wind power companies may constitute by default an endorsement of offshore energy propagation and the fact that fishermen think that the worst possible place to put any valuable equipment is in the ocean off of Humboldt County, right in the middle of our fishing grounds.

Mitigation (Or that Bag of Cash)

Fishermen, the fishing industry and all other businesses and families that make a living from the primary production of seafood from a highly managed, sustainable local source will feel that loss of local fishing grounds for generations. After all, a healthy community prospers when there is stability and long-term success in a diversity of professions including fishing and seafood production.

In other coastal areas, offshore energy and submarine cable companies have tried to pay three or four fishermen for the loss of fishing grounds and then conduct business as usual, effectively deferring all the economic costs associated with those losses back to the community hit. On the East Coast, some fishermen are now requesting $300 million to $400 million to buy out fishermen and fishing businesses after the fact because wind power impacts were poorly addressed during design and implementation. That can't be allowed to happen here. Offshore cable companies tried the "Bag of Cash" strategy in Morro Bay. The Morro Bay Commercial Fishermen's Association stopped that from happening and instead negotiated with cable companies on behalf of all fishermen in Morro and Avila bays, developing a community benefit package that funds safety equipment for fishermen and supports their fishing community.

If offshore wind power is serious about succeeding in Humboldt County, these developers should plan on negotiating a significant community benefit package to provide funding for permanent shoreside infrastructure that will benefit the local fishing community, the city of Eureka, local business and Humboldt County at large. Funneling some of the state and federal tax subsidies they intend to reap back into local infrastructure projects would show their acknowledgement of the permanent impacts of their actions and, in the long run, be far more effective at holding community support for wind power than millions of dollars spent on advertising to convince the public that offshore energy is without impacts.

Canna-count the Votes

By Thadeus Greenson

thad@northcoastjournal.com

Lost amid all the talk of a looming red or blue wave coming on Election Day, depending on who you ask on what particular day, is the likelihood that a green wave will continue to sweep over the country.

A total of 30 states across the country have already legalized or decriminalized cannabis for medical use, with another nine having approved the drug for adult recreational use. Polls indicate those numbers are about to grow.

In Michigan, voters will decide Proposal 1, which would legalize possession and cultivation for personal use by those 21 and older. Polling indicates 62 percent of registered voters — including a stunning 92 percent of those ages 18 to 29 — plan to vote for the measure.

In North Dakota, which boasts the sixth highest per capita marijuana arrest rates in the nation, according to FBI data, voters are poised to vote on Measure 3, which would legalize adult use and possession and expunge most prior cannabis-related convictions. Polling in the Roughrider State has been mixed.

Voters in Missouri and Utah, meanwhile, will decide whether to legalize medical marijuana, with more than 60 percent of voters supporting the measures in both states, according to polling data reported by The Hill.

All told, come Nov. 7, cannabis could be legal in some form in 43 of the nation's 50 states. But some marijuana advocates have their eyes on a different prize entirely.

Despite the massive and — at this point — prolonged upswell in public support for putting an end to federal cannabis prohibition (a recent Gallup poll puts the number at 64 percent), bills to that end have fared poorly in Congress. That's largely because Republican leadership has refused to give them a hearing.

House Judiciary Chair Robert Goodlatte (R-Virginia) and Senate Judiciary Chair Charles Grassley (R-Iowa) have publicly said that they've blocked dozens of cannabis bills from leaving their powerful committees, essentially resigning them to a slow and quiet death. House Rules Committee Chairman Pete Sessions (R-Texas) has blocked House floor votes on more than three dozen cannabis bills and amendments. For two consecutive years, GOP leaders have also used the budget reconciliation process to gut provisions that would have given military veterans access to medical cannabis in states that allow it.

Goodlatte isn't seeking re-election, Sessions is facing a tough challenge and Grassley isn't up for a vote again until 2022. But the larger question is whether Democrats can flip control of the House and the Senate, allowing them to put their own party members in charge of these powerful committees that control what bills are heard. It's worth noting here that Democratic leadership has grown increasingly outspoken on the issue, with the national party having added federal legalization to its platform back in 2016 and a handful of its 2020 hopefuls endorsing the idea.

So what are the chances that the green wave crashes down on Congress next year? The polling aggregator www.fivethirtyeight.com says Democrats have an 85 percent chance of flipping the House and a 19 percent chance in the Senate.

It's hard to predict what a split Congress would mean for cannabis.

California Republican Congressman Dana Rohrabacher made headlines last week when he told Fox Business that the Trump administration has made a "solid commitment" to reforming cannabis legislation in the United States after the midterms.

Forgetting for a second that the president also "committed" to making Mexico pay for a border wall, releasing his tax returns after the 2016 election and not taking vacations while in office, it's also fair to wonder how much control he has over GOP leaders. The STATES Act, which was introduced in June and would essentially defer to state laws on cannabis, has bipartisan support and Trump's endorsement, yet has not seen a single Congressional hearing. There's also the fact that Rohrabacher himself might be looking for a new job come 2019 as he is currently in a dead-heat to retain his House seat.

This is all to say that those hoping to see the green wave that's already swept up 78 percent of the United States — and that has the support of 64 percent of the country — break over the federal government might want to start donating to Democratic Senate candidates. That or bank on the administration's "solid commitment." ●

Affidavit Offers New Details in Cemetery Stabbing

The murder case against a 15-year-old accused of fatally stabbing another teenage boy in the Ocean View Cemetery on Aug. 9 will continue in the juvenile court system after Gov. Jerry Brown signed a law Sept. 30 that prohibits charging individuals as adults if they were younger than 16 at the time of the accused crime.

As reported by the Lost Coast Outpost, a hearing had been scheduled for this week on whether the teen suspect, who is charged with murder, should be tried as an adult in the death of 16-year-old Brandon Brocious. His mother Lorna Leen is also charged with murder and both have pleaded not guilty. Her preliminary hearing is scheduled for Nov. 7.

According to an arrest warrant affidavit filed in the case and obtained by the Journal, Brocious was stabbed during a confrontation with the suspect and his mother over a stolen cell phone. During the argument, Leen reportedly held back a teenage girl who was with Brocious while her son stabbed him.

The affidavit, based on the teenage girl's account, states that she and Brocious had hidden the belongings of Leen and her son, who had been camping near the cemetery, earlier in the day on Aug. 9 in retaliation for the stolen phone. But she said they later went back to return the items.

According to previous media reports, Brocious' family believes he became acquainted with Leen and her son while distributing his homemade sourdough bread to the homeless.

After finding Leen and her son at the cemetery, the affidavit states Brocious told the teen suspect that they were keeping his backpack until the phone was returned. The suspect then reportedly said, "Mom you got my back," and "Either you hold him (Brocious) or her (the teen girl)" and displayed a large kitchen knife, which he began swinging at Brocious.

The teen girl attempted to intercede but Leen held her back as Brocious tried to get away but fell and was stabbed in the chest, the affidavit states. She tried to render aid as the teen suspect and his mother fled the scene, with Leen telling the girl to call 911.

Eureka Police Department officers arrived at the scene just after 9 p.m. and found Brocious dead but the girl had fled home to tell her father. He spoke with the detective who wrote up the affidavit. The girl said she believes Brocious died before she left.

Leen and her son were each arrested on $1 million warrants the next morning. If convicted in the juvenile system, the teen suspect will face incarceration until he turns 25 instead of the 25 years to life in prison he would face if tried as an adult.

Vandalized

The statue of President William McKinley at the center of the Arcata Plaza was vandalized the night of Oct. 15 or early the next morning, doused with some sort of liquid that left a greenish patina discoloration down the front and back of the figure. The vandalism was discovered by a city employee and came just weeks before city voters are set to decide the statue's fate with Measure M, which seeks to block the city council's February decision to remove the monument to the nation's 25th president. Swerving with Merv

The story of a rock and roll medicine man

By André Cramblit

newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

Merv George served as the front man for The Merv George Band for the better part of six decades.

To say that Merv George was a local legend is an understatement. He was a man who led by example. He stood out among his peers as the righteous savior of the old world who could blend it with the new one dawning. His main passions in life were his music, his family and his traditional beliefs as a Hupa tribal spiritual leader. He lived his life blending two worlds that were indeed disparate but his ability to navigate that duality is what made him unique. His canny ability to make people feel at home and his calming presence showed what a grounded and respectful person you were in company with.

A dedicated family man is one appropriate way to describe George. He relished the time spent with his children and grandchildren, volunteering many hours to help coach baseball, softball and track. He was often the chauffeur to many of the activities throughout a hectic week jammed with multiple games and events.

After suffering a severe stroke, George died Aug. 31 at the age of 74 while being transported home from Redding Mercy Hospital. "He had my mom by his side and he went peacefully," George's son Merv George Jr. wrote on Facebook, adding that his father "waited until we got near Weaverville and could see the Trinity River before he left us."

George grew up in a time when the two worlds were crashing together. It wasn't always good to be an Indian and his generation was encouraged to move out into the world and blend in to make life easier for their children than they'd had it at home. My mom is close in age to George and was raised only speaking English so she could be understood and move ahead in the Western world. But at home, she only heard the Karuk language of the elders who raised her. People in this generation were torn between the divergent concepts of what it meant to be successful in terms of being a Native or in living at ease in the outside culture of Western society.

I first heard George and his soulful style of rock and roll when I was a senior in high school. I had just moved to the Hoopa reservation and our house was adjacent to the tribal headquarters. One Friday night, my window was open and I heard that Merv George magic dancing its way to my house from some fundraiser he had been hired to play next door at the neighborhood facilities. As a DJ at KIDE, the tribal radio station, I would play his music on air, frequently getting requests to spin his tunes. Listening to the laid-back melodies and his dulcet tones was truly a breath of fresh air.

My first Merv George dance, I didn't even get inside the venue. The party had spilled into the parking lot and we sat in the cab of a truck sipping brews and listening to the melodies floating on the warm summer breeze. My cousin thrust his head out of a window and yelled, "Katamiin," the name of our Karuk Village, even though we were deep in the heart of Hupa tribal territory. Fortunately, the camaraderie of the music and dancing prevailed over tribal animosities.

With a trademark twinkle in his eye, George would greet you with a quick smile and make you feel like a lifelong friend. He would ask about your job, your family and your health. He would listen with genuine interest, a people person to the core.

I was the chairman of the parent advisory committee for Northern Humboldt Unified School District. Among the many projects and activities of the program, the parent committee awarded an annual scholarship to one American Indian graduate of McKinleyville, Arcata and Six Rivers Charter high schools. We would raise money in small chunks doing the regular bake sales, Indian taco sales, car washes, candy bar sales and the like. It was tedious and time-consuming, and it took all year to raise enough money to give out a respectably sized scholarship. I was tired of constantly figuring out ways to raise funds.

I thought one big event would be a better use of the efforts of the parent committee. We decided to ask George to play for a Valentine's Day dance and "Swerve with Merv" was born. We solicited donations from local businesses for a silent auction, booked The Merv George Band to play at the Blue Lake Casino, sat back and watched the money flow in. People came from all over Northern California, many trekking long distances to hear one of their favorites do what he did best. We made enough money in one night to raise the amount we gave in scholarships and increase the number we gave out. It could not have happened without the discounted fee George charged us.

He believed in the power of education and used his drawing power to help our parent committee make college affordable for a few Native students. George also supported students in the Northern Humboldt Indian Education Program for several years. The program would arrange for students to take a field trip to attend the Jump Dance and Boat Dance ceremony in Hoopa. George always made a point of taking a break from his duties as dance leader to greet the incoming students and educate them about the ceremony they were attending. According to his wife Laura Lee George, who is Karuk, George felt American Indian education encompassed much more than just the physical presence of the school.

"Merv believed that education in general was important in today's world to make a decent living. ... Indian education nies he was now responsible for holding. He helped revive the local young woman's coming of age ceremony known as the Flower Dance. He felt it was important to depict the nuances of his belief system to the broader world, which ultimately led to his and several members of his family being consulted as curators when the Smithsonian Institution opened the National Museum of the American Indian in 2004 and included an exhibit on the Hupa people and culture. According to Laura Lee George, the exhibit is still on display today.

When you start to ask community members about George, you quickly get a feel for the impact he had on the local scene.

Karen Skoglund, a Hupa tribal member, recalls many good times throughout her life when George would play and the community would gather to socialize and have fun together. Her daughter had him play at her senior prom and pronounced it the "best dance ever."

Elizabeth Lara-O'Rourke, of Yurok, Hupa, Karuk and Chilula ancestry, spoke of the generations of people who would come together. When her family heard there was a chance to get down and boogie with George and the boys, they would plan a mini family reunion and gather a group of all ages who enjoyed listening to this special person play the tunes they loved. Her favorite memory is dancing with all the men in her life at once, her father, husband and son surrounding her while George's sweet voice hit all the right notes to keep the house a rockin'. She remembers listening to his music as her mother Delores Moon Mercado bought 8-tracks of his songs and would remind the children that he was their cousin on the Moon side.

Playing music gave George a certain notoriety in the local community that would often follow him wherever he happened to be. Finding himself at a rest stop one time in Utah, he was noticed as the dance floor king that he was by the Fat Albert's Restaurant T-shirt he wore from a venue back home in Humboldt County. He never learned to read sheet music, he just relied on a natural gift of perfect pitch to learn the music he heard around him. He took his love of music seriously and shared it with the community on many occasions in many venues. As the "free" entertainment at the county fair, he would draw almost as many people as the headliners charging big ticket prices. He was always a popular choice to play at a wedding reception (sometimes for more than one by any given individual, depending on how many times they got married). He never had a set playlist, preferring to read the crowd and take requests of favorites from his huge catalogue of songs he'd made his own.

Laura Lee George, George's high school sweetheart and wife of nearly 54 years, said music defined her husband.

"Merv was a professional musician and powerful Native American ceremonial singer in and around the North Coast of California for 60-plus of his 74 years of life," she said. "Music was a constant, steady, healing force throughout his life. In all of its forms, he believed it provided healing and calm in chaotic times. It was a way to bring happiness and smiles to others and thus, in turn, to himself. In his own life, music enabled Merv to overcome bullying, racism and prejudices he encountered in his journeys. He recognized the therapeutic power it held so he always made sure his own children and grandchildren and their classmates had access to instruments, music sheets, recorded music lessons, PA systems, and of course live music."

To carry on George's legacy of helping children to learn and enjoy the power of live music, a fund — The Merv George Memorial Music Fund — has been set up at the Humboldt Area Foundation to bring instruments, music instruction and appreciation, to promote live music and bring music education for school age children in Humboldt County, primarily in the Hoopa Valley.

Profits from the sale of A Celebration of Merv's Life CD will go into the fund. Other tax-deductible donations can be sent to: The Merv George Memorial Music Fund, Humboldt Area Foundation, 363 Indianola Road, Bayside, CA 95524.

George's family invites the community to join them for a celebration of his life at 1 p.m. on Oct. 21 at the Bear River Event Center. As his daughter Jennifer George wrote, "May his music live on in all of your lives and bring you the same joy that it brings me." ●

André Cramblit is a Karuk tribal member and is grateful to have been mentored by his cousin Laura Lee George. He enjoyed dancing to The Merv George Band and will miss his presence at the annual "Swerve with Merv" fundraiser.

A Cook's Book Club

And a Russian egg salad

By Simona Carini

tabletalk@northcoastjournal.com

My cooking is variously inspired by seasonal produce, memories of people or places, cravings for specific ingredients or dishes, and reading. Yes, you read that last one right.

For the past 11 years on my blog Briciole, I have been hosting a literary/culinary event called Novel Food. And for the past 10 years I have been a member, then co-host, of Cook the Books Club, a bimonthly book club/blog event that focuses on food-rich books. Though the two events have slightly different rules for participating, they are both about reading and the cooking it inspires.

Inspiration can take different routes. In recent years memoirs that include recipes have become popular (a favorite of mine is Stir by Jessica Fechter). But for Novel Food and the Cook the Books Club, a book needs only mention an ingredient or a dish — from there one can research the details and prepare the dish. Or a book can generate the idea for a dish. For example, earlier this year I read Among the Lesser Gods by Margo Catts, a novel about a young woman named Elena who takes care of two young children whose mother has died. Elena often has to be creative with whatever food is in the refrigerator, which inspired a recipe for my Empty the Crisper side dish.

The shared aspect of a blog event means that participants read each other's book reviews — one of the pleasures of a book club — as well as the recipes. On one hand, in-person book clubs often include "actual" food sharing. On the other hand, a virtual book club expands the circle of participants to anywhere on earth, providing an additional dimension of variety.

Some of our club members are eBook readers, others are audio book listeners. I am a printed page holdout: I relish the book as a physical object, the smell of paper and ink, the feel of the page under my fingertips, the weight of the book in my hands.

Another great thing about book clubs is that they nudge you into reading beyond your usual boundaries. The selection may be a pleasant surprise, possibly a disappointment or anything in between: Whatever the case, you will probably learn something about the world and about yourself. When submerged by a negative tide, take refuge in a book or cooking. Trust me, it works.

The recipe here is my take on a recipe from Please to the Table: The Russian Cookbook by Anya von Bremzen and John Welchman, an amazing compilation of recipes from the 15 former Soviet republics. Von Bremzen's Mastering the Art of Soviet Cooking: A Memoir of Food & Longing was one of last year's selections of the Cook the Books Club. I enjoyed the book, which I recommend, in particular if you like history mixed in with personal stories.

Mushroom and Egg Salad

Serves 2, more if served as an appetizer.
Ingredients:

- 2 ½ tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil, divided
- 8 ounces white button or cremini mushrooms or a mix of the two, cleaned and sliced (King Trumpet mushrooms are also good)
- ½ cup fresh red onion, minced

- 3 tablespoons fresh dill or chervil, finely chopped
- 2 hard-boiled eggs, roughly diced
- ¼ cup mayonnaise, preferably homemade
- 2 teaspoons yellow or Dijon mustard
- ½ tablespoon fresh lemon juice
- Fine sea salt and freshly ground black pepper, to taste
- 1 ounce baby spinach
- 1 ounce arugula

In a skillet over medium-high flame, heat 1½ tablespoons of the olive oil and add the mushrooms. Stirring often, cook the mushrooms until browned, about 15 minutes. Transfer the mushrooms to a bowl and set aside.

Heat the remaining tablespoon of olive oil in the skillet and add the minced onion. Cook on gentle heat, stirring regularly until the onions are soft and slightly caramelized, about 12 minutes. Transfer them to the bowl with the mushrooms. Add the dill (or chervil) and the hard-boiled eggs.

In a small bowl, whisk together the mayonnaise, mustard and lemon juice. Add this to the mushroom and egg mixture and toss until evenly distributed. Season with salt and pepper, to taste.

Line a serving bowl with the baby spinach and arugula. Spoon the mushroom and egg salad on the bed of greens. Toss to mix in the greens and serve.

Seriously?

Mindful Bitchface

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill
jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

After a lifetime of strangers scurrying from my path, coworkers asking if I'm angry with them and people looking back at me with a panicked "What?" I accepted my diagnosis. I have what medical professionals call severe chronic resting bitchface. My features naturally relax into a scowl somewhere between judgy stone statue and pre-strike hooded cobra. When concentrating or listening intently, my brows angle down like train cars about to collide. Occasionally the left eyebrow makes a break for my hairline in an arch that would make Scully flinch.

Did my childhood RBF save me from sharing a seat on the bus through elementary and middle school? Sure. But the perks have been few. I've tried to manage my RBF and soften my features when ordering food or taking notes in meetings. Apparently I've been unsuccessful, though I'm told I look fine smiling in photos so long as I don't bare my teeth. If not laughing or eating, say, a very good piece of cheesecake, I look like I'm planning your death, where to bury you and how much salt I'll need to make sure nothing ever grows there again.

When people recoil, I've always responded with, "This is just my face." But lately, if you ask me about my RBF, even if I happen to be reclining by a pool, drinking from a pineapple, I might overcome the reflex to dismiss my expression and reply, "I'm filled with a molten rage that could turn this whole place and everyone in it to silvery heaps of ash. Thanks for asking."

Because holy hell.

I know I'm not alone. But getting through the day, especially for women, people of color and LGBTQ folks, requires a certain amount of camouflage. Smile, though your heart is breaking, goes the song. And that's what most of us — especially women — are trained to do. We smile while crushing news comes in through our screens. We smile in uncomfortable or even frightening moments, trying to soothe the very people who make us want to run while we bite holes in our cheeks.

So instead of fighting my bitchface, I

Portrait of the author with a young bitchface.

Submitted

choose to live my authentic facial truth, to be fully present in my scowl and to inhabit it mindfully. Here, I give it meaning and purpose in the world. I hereby dedicate it on behalf of all the angry people for whom a chilly side-eye is not available. I may be a woman of color but I'm cis-het-ero and light-skinned Asian, so my anger isn't going to earn me the same criticism as a black woman, for example. And I'm happy to use my bitchface privilege to remind those who might otherwise glide through the day unbothered and unaffected that we are not all fine, not all happy, our placid expressions exhausting work that not all of us want to do.

More generous people than I will open hearts and minds, tug us gently back toward the better angels of our nature. But we all must use the gifts we are given and mine is a gorgonesque expression that never wears off. Some give voice to the voiceless. I'm bitchfacing for the bitchfaceless.

But how will you know, should our eyes lock at the self-checkout line or the toppings bar of a frozen yogurt place, whether my bitchface is for you or at you?

Well, are you willfully misunderstanding players kneeling at a football game as protesting "The Star-Spangled Banner" and a slight against veterans (more specifically white veterans?) rather than disproportionate and deadly police violence against black people? Then this bitchface is for you. Are you chuckling along as the president mocks a survivor of sexual assault? I've got something special for you. (Spoiler: It's a bitchface.) Maybe you're good with children being forcibly taken from their families and locked up. If so, please come to the front to collect your bitchface.

Still pretending, in the face of dizzyingly grim scientific data, that climate change is a hoax? Congratulations — it's a bouncing baby bitchface. Worried about giving equal time to white supremacists in news media? Behold my bitchface as it melts you like an Indiana Jones Nazi. Did you just tell me to smile? It sounded like you ordered a bitchface.

To my sisters with RBF: I see your mighty gazes and recognize their power. Join me and embrace your stern faces, deploying them as a reminder to all who dare look upon them that we have not cosigned this bullshit, we are not OK. Because holy hell. ●

Anniversaries, Dreams and Hauntings

By Collin Yeo

music@northcoastjournal.com

I am not a nostalgic fella and I tend to have a private needle that clicks between “ignorant indifference” and “seething distrust” when it comes to all of the hallmarks and anniversaries that we are collectively reminded to celebrate. However, in deference to my readers, of whom I am genuinely fond, and for the sake of posterity, I would like to note that this column marks the one-year anniversary of my time writing the Setlist. I would like to extend my humble and sincere thanks to all of you who enjoy the Journal, as well as the scribbles of a lone weirdo writing a weekly manifesto about the nightlife in a remote and beautiful corner of the world. I have had a great 360 or so degrees doing this gig and I look forward to sharing more music with you all in further bright revolutions around the sun and with the moon in tow.

Have a beautiful week.

Thursday

Memphis, Tennessee’s punk garage wildlings Ex-Cult brings the psychedelic circle-pit sturm und drang to The Miniplex tonight at 8:30 p.m. ($7). In tow for the fun is Oakland’s punk act Manback as well as local garage punk act Wet Spot.

Friday

There’s a mixed-bag but mostly folky affair happening at The Outer Space tonight at 7 p.m. Cinder Well plays a doomy sort of string music and will be supported by Humboldt’s own singer/songwriters Hollan, Big Dumb Swede and electro act Knot They’re ($6).

Also at 7 p.m. in the beautiful environs adjacent to Elephant Rock, it’s the third Friday of the month blues jam at the Westhaven Center for the Arts. Let Jim Lahman, Ron Perry, Bill Moehnke and the always excellent bassist Dale Cash walk you through a century of blues music ($5-$10 sliding scale).

Saturday

It’s the eighth annual presentation of the live interpretive soundtrack of Akira Kurosawa’s Dreams at The Sanctuary this evening at 7 p.m. One of the master’s last films will be shown with eight different bands interpreting the sounds for the eight principle vignettes for a show which is guaranteed to be worth a gander. Featured groups include Die Geister Beschwören, The Tweeners, Medicine Baul, SamVega and mister moonbeam. Tickets are $12 or $10 advance and worth every penny, while having to remove one’s shoes for the venue is a personal price weighed by the general public.

Later at The Alibi, Opossum Sun Trail interprets the songs of Bakersfield’s own Merle Haggard at 11 p.m. and $3 buys entry into the live songbook of a troubled country troubadour.

Sunday

Down the rabbit hole you are invited to go at the Siren’s Song tonight at 8 p.m. when a local bass-heavy electronic cadre takes the stage. Come join SnackieMF-chan, DrinkingMoonlight, Badam and more with visual effects by VJWEEZYPAIN for a night of pure imagination. As of press time I have no idea what this show costs but I would bet the ticket is worth the value of the ride.

Monday

It’s really spooky out tonight. And by spooky I mean extinct. Ghoulishly dead on the scene. So instead of a show please allow me to suggest a couple of seasonally appropriate movies that tend to get overlooked but are actually quite worth your time. James Whale is perhaps best known as the openly gay director of the original Frankenstein film who tragically drowned himself in his own pool at the age of 67. However, he also made a wild gem with Boris Karloff and Charles Laughton in 1932 called The Old Dark House about an accidental evening spent in — well, where do you think? The atmosphere in this one is just fantastic and unparalleled.

If you want something thrilling and perfectly creepy, I must recommend The Exorcist III: Legion. Greatness often skips a generation and this sequel of a sequel is no exception. Keep an eye out for the most horrifying decapitation shocker ever set to 35 millimeters.

Tuesday

Nationally touring funk band Kung Fu plays Humbrews tonight at 9 p.m. Known for a sound that combines the mid 1970s aesthetics of jazz fusion with modern EDM, this group is generally feted on the jam circuit for its tight grooves and spontaneous shows. Tickets are $15 in advance and $18 at the door tonight so it isn’t too steep of a price to find out what it’s all about on the dance floor.

Wednesday

Cirque Mechanics is a traveling troupe of steampunk-ish circus acrobats who mix music, mechanical animals and daring aerial acts in a stunning show of modern performance art. The troupe will be performing its 42FT-Menagerie of Mechanical Marvels show at the Arkley Center for the Performing Arts tonight at 7 p.m. for your viewing pleasure ($49, $29 children, $15 students).

Full show listings in the Journal’s Music and More grid, the Calendar and online. Bands and promoters, send your gig info, preferably with a high-res photo or two, to music@northcoastjournal.com.

Collin Yeo is celebrating the beatification of Saint Oscar Romero, a man who faced fascist death squads with entreaties to peace, dignity and a cessation of government-ordered violence. He would like us all to be more like that. He lives in Arcata.

Cops

The ARMACK Orchestra, comprised of students from Arcata and McKinleyville high schools, pulls some strings to provide live scoring to Charlie Chaplin's The Rink (1916) and Buster Keaton's Cops (1922) during Silent Film Classic Comedies, showing Thursday, Oct. 18 at 7 p.m. and Saturday, Oct. 20 at 2 and 7 p.m. at Arcata High School ($8, $5 students).

Swing out, sister. Center Arts presents Cirque Mechanics in a "jaw-dropping stage spectacular" for all ages featuring a galloping metal horse, strongmen, acrobats, aerialists and more. Wednesday, Oct. 24 at 7 p.m. at Arkley Center for the Performing Arts ($29-$49).

Submitted

Into weird science? Kids, take part in cool, hands-on activities and experiments at Science Night on Friday, Oct. 19 from 5 to 9 p.m. at College of the Redwoods (free). With more than 25 activities like Howling Gummi Bears, Chemical Magic Show and Pumpkin Chucking Trebuchet (catapult), it's hair-raising fun for the whole family.

Dance Macabre

There's a chill in the air, Turner Classic Movies has unwrapped all the Mummy flicks and your favorite candies are now fun-sized and wrapped in orange and black. Mid-October is here, fiends — it's time to get your freak on.

Two dark delights on local stages this season offer spooktacular frights and fun. The Halloween tale with the confusing holiday title, 'Twas The Nightmare Before Christmas, spins to life Saturday, Oct. 20 at 2 and 7 p.m., and Sunday, Oct. 21 at 2 p.m. at Redwood Raks World Dance Studio ($10, $8 kids). 555 Contemporary Dance Company and The Ink People present this spooky and entertaining all-dance performance with guest artists Ya Habibi Dance Company, Sassafrafs Belly Dance Company, Susie Kidd, Melanie Quillen Zapper and Amy Remy.

Something creepier, kookier and altogether spookier for a slightly older set — ages 16 and up — is Dell'Arte Company's annual Macabre Cabaret, freaking out audiences Friday and Saturday, Oct. 19-20 at 8 p.m. at the Carlo Theatre ($15, $12 students/seniors). One of the company's most popular shows, the cabaret features a mixture of terrifying and humorous (nervous laughter?) with eccentric dances, macabre storytelling and untold thrills and chills. To secure your spot in the (possibly haunted) Carlo Theater, call 668-5663 or visit www.dellarte.com.

Comedian Steven Wright

Curb Your Enthusiasm

Comedian Steven Wright is a man of few words. Fortunately for us, they're funny.

If you like your humor understated and your delivery of the deadpan variety, be sure to catch Wright and all his frizzy-haired, monotonous genius Sunday, Oct. 21 at 8 p.m. when he performs at the Arkley Center for the Performing Arts ($49).

Wright is a master of the one-liner. He who practices the old pause in the punchline. His jokes spill out of his mouth almost as an afterthought, and he knows when to shut up and let it sink in. No 'splaining needed.

Some of his gems include:

"I went to a tourist information booth and said, 'Tell me about some people who were here last year.'"

"I spilled spot remover on my dog and now he's gone."

"I went to a place to eat. It said 'breakfast at any time.' So I ordered French toast during the Renaissance."

All right, all right, I won't share them all here. Want more? Get to the Arkley on Sunday and check out Dev Richards' interview with Wright at www.northcoastjournal.com right now.

Stay calm and joke on.

First Man Misses its Moonshot

El Royale overstays its welcome

By John J. Bennett

filmland@northcoastjournal.com

Hey, girl. I'll fight anybody who says Pluto isn't a planet
First Man

Previews

FIRST MAN. "Hey Girl" memes and references to The Notebook (2004) aside, Ryan Gosling has become one of the most versatile, self-challenging leading men in Hollywood, with a constantly growing filmography to reflect it. Now he works almost exclusively on major releases for prestige directors but he brings intense focus and emotional depth to those projects such that his presence can make a big movie feel intimate and raw. And he can be funny as hell, which goes a long way, but in this case it also presents a conundrum: Gosling's got the goods but can he — or should he — be charged with carrying a near-humorless story and playing a near-humorless character?

There is a similar conflict inherent in Damien Chazelle's role as director here. He who garnered so much attention with his second feature, Whiplash (2014) and then was anointed upon the release of his third, the excellent, lily-white La La Land (2016), which marked his first collaboration with Gosling. Those movies are defined by their musicality, the marriage of story pacing and soundtrack, as much as they are by the distinct visual style deployed in each. Clearly Chazelle has a vision for each project, a veteran director's sense of visual storytelling, but will that vision hold when he moves beyond the influence of jazz, back six decades for a quasi-biopic that reaches literally from here to the moon?

The answer to both questions is yes, mostly, but not without reservations.

First Man tracks Neil Armstrong's (Gosling) career at NASA from 1961 to 1969, as the American government accelerated its flinging of men and matériel farther and farther into space in an attempt to demonstrate superiority over the Soviets (an effort met with middling success overall). The movie opens with Armstrong strapped into a creaking, clattering airplane hundreds of thousands of feet above the surface of the Earth. So high up, in fact, that the aircraft slips the planet's atmosphere and begins to bounce against it — terrifying circumstances where only the coolest heads could avoid death. But Armstrong proves himself to be that cool, finding a way to roll the careening craft onto its side, decreasing its silhouette and knife-edging it back to ground. It's a breathtaking, beautiful, dynamic sequence that serves both as an attention-grabbing opening scene and as a wordless description of Armstrong's strength as a problem-solver in times of crisis. The problem, then, is that we've got another two-plus hours of running time to cover the following nine years and to describe Armstrong as an introvert, a taciturn engineer unwilling or unable to make himself emotionally available in his private life.

And it's in attempting that balance of literal otherworldly action and restrained domestic drama that First Man falters. I hesitate to say this is down to either its director or its star. Chazelle's envisioning of the time period, his creative team's efforts to recreate the details, the fine cinematography by Linus Sandgren and editing by Tom Cross — both have worked with Chazelle on all of his features and one might say the movies belong as much to them as to him — are all exquisitely executed. Likewise Gosling's pared down performance, which hints at Armstrong's inner life, at the depth of the emotions he keeps so closely controlled and the performances of the exceptional supporting cast. Claire Foy in particular, as Janet Armstrong, provides the perspective of a witness to the tragedies underlying the occasional triumph of the space program with a sometimes uncomfortably intimate rawness.

The problem with First Man, then, is not in any element of its execution, rather in the source material. Be that the actual events, the book by James R Hansen or the adaptation by Josh Singer, I really can't say. But there is something in the attempted balance of a protagonist with such a singular, protected point of view against a backdrop bigger than the known world that diminishes the overall effect of the uniformly excellent storytelling. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK, MINOR.

BAD TIMES AT THE EL ROYALE. Drew Goddard came to prominence as a writer on the last season of TV's Buffy the Vampire Slayer, which is a guiltless pleasure. He went on to write on the last season of Buffy spin-off Angel and then a boatload of other TV work, all which gained him enough traction to direct The Cabin in the Woods (2012), which he co-wrote with Joss Whedon and is beloved for good reason.

With Bad Times at the El Royale, Goddard takes his formidable ability to synthesize popular culture and turns it on the end of the 1960s and a group of strangers meeting by chance at a once-thriving casino hotel on the California-Nevada border. It's part caper picture, part locked-room mystery, part Vietnam commentary, part spy thriller, part sibling cult-rescue, with a soul soundtrack pumped out of a prominent, bubbling Wurlitzer jukebox. The cast is tremendous and the style of the thing admirable. But it's too long by almost a third, leaves questions unanswered that prove more frustrating than titillating and resolves its complex plot elements with a too-convenient, not-quite shockingly violent climax. To be admired despite its faults, it still can't quite transcend them. R. 141M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

SMALLFOOT. Channing Tatum and James Corden voice an animated feature about a yeti out to prove the existence of a human. PG. 96M. BROADWAY.

A STAR IS BORN. Bradley Cooper's directorial debut casts him and Lady Gaga (who amazes) as leads in a surprisingly real examination of love, art, celebrity, addiction, sacrifice and depression. R. 136M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK, MINOR.

VENOM. This relative Marvel underdog doesn't disappoint. Despite its flaws. Tom Hardy brings his signature commitment, Michelle Williams overcomes an underwritten character and Matthew Libatique's cinematography is top notch. R. 135M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK, MINOR.

Free Will Astrology

Week of Oct. 18, 2018

By Rob Breznsy

freewillastrology@freewillastrology.com

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Humraaz is a word in the Urdu language. Its literal meaning is “secret sharer.” It refers to a confidante, a person in whom you have full trust and to whom you can confess your core feelings. Is there such a character in your life? If so, seek him or her out for assistance in probing into the educational mysteries you have waded into. If there is no such helper you can call on, I advise you to do whatever’s necessary to attract him or her into your sphere. A collaborative quest may be the key to activating sleeping reserves of your soul wisdom.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Taurus author Roberto Bolaño suggests that the world contains more beauty than many people realize. The full scope and intensity of this nourishing beauty “is only visible to those who love.” When he speaks of “those who love,” I suspect he means deep-feeling devotees of kindness and compassion, hard-working servants of the greater good and free-thinking practitioners of the Golden Rule. In any case, Taurus, I believe you’re in a phase when you have the potential to see far more of the world’s beauty. For best results, supercharge your capacity to give and receive love.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Once upon a time you were walking along a sidewalk when a fairy floated by and whispered, “I’m willing to grant you three wishy-washy wishes for free. You don’t have to do any favors for me in return. But I will grant you three wonderfully wise wishes if you perform three tasks for me.” You asked the fairy, “What would those three tasks be?” She replied, “The second task is that you must hoodwink the devil into allowing you to shave his hairy legs. The third task is that you must bamboozle God into allowing you to shave his bushy beard.” You laughed and said, “What’s the first task?” The fairy touched you on the nose with her tiny wand and said, “You must believe that the best way to achieve the impossible is to attempt the absurd.”

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You Crabs tend to be the stockpilers and hoarders of the zodiac. The world’s largest collections of antique door knobs and Chinese restaurant menus and beer cans from the 1960s belong to Cancerian accumulators. But in alignment with possibilities hinted at by current astrological omens, I recommend that you redirect this inclination so it serves you better. How? One way would be to gather supplies of precious stuff that’s really useful to you. Another way would be to assemble a batch of blessings to bestow on people and animals who provide you with support.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Chinese mythology tells us there used to be ten suns, all born from the mother goddess Xi He. Every 24 hours, she bathed her brood in the lake and placed them in a giant mulberry tree. From there, one sun glided out into the sky to begin the day while the other nine remained behind. It was a good arrangement. The week had ten days back then, and each sun got its turn to shine. But the siblings eventually grew restless with the staid rhythm. On one fateful morning, with a playful flourish, they all soared into the heavens at once. It was fun for them, but the earth grew so hot that nothing would grow. To the rescue came the archer Hou Yi. With his flawless aim, he used his arrows to shoot down nine of the suns, leaving one to provide just the right amount of light and warmth. The old tales don’t tell us, but I speculate that Hou Yi was a Leo.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You now have maximum command of a capacity that’s a great strength but also a potential liability: your piercing brainpower. To help ensure that you wield this asset in ways that empower you and don’t sabotage you, here’s advice from four wise Virgos. 1. “Thought can organize the world so well that you are no longer able to see it.” — psychotherapist Anthony de Mello 2. “Keep some room in your heart for the unimaginable.” —poet Mary Oliver 3. “I like to wake up each morning and not know what I think, that I may reinvent myself in some way.” —actor and writer Stephen Fry 4. “I wanted space to watch things grow.” —singer Florence Welch.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): “There are works which wait, and which one does not understand for a long time,” wrote Libran author Oscar Wilde. “The reason is that they bring answers to questions which have not yet been raised; for the question often arrives a long time after the answer.” That’s the weird news, Libra. You have been waiting and waiting to understand a project that you set in motion many moons ago. It has been frustrating to give so much energy to a goal that has sometimes confused you. But here’s the good news: Soon you will finally formulate the question your project has been the answer to. And so at last you will understand it. You’ll feel vindicated, illuminated, and resolved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Many seekers who read horoscope columns want common-sense advice about love, career, money and power. So I hope I don’t disappoint you by predicting that you will soon have a mystical experience or spiritual epiphany. Let me add, however, that this delightful surprise won’t merely be an entertaining diversion with no useful application. In fact, I suspect it will have the potential of inspiring good ideas about love, career, money or power. If I had to give the next chapter of your life story a title, it might be “A Thousand Dollars’ Worth of Practical Magic.”

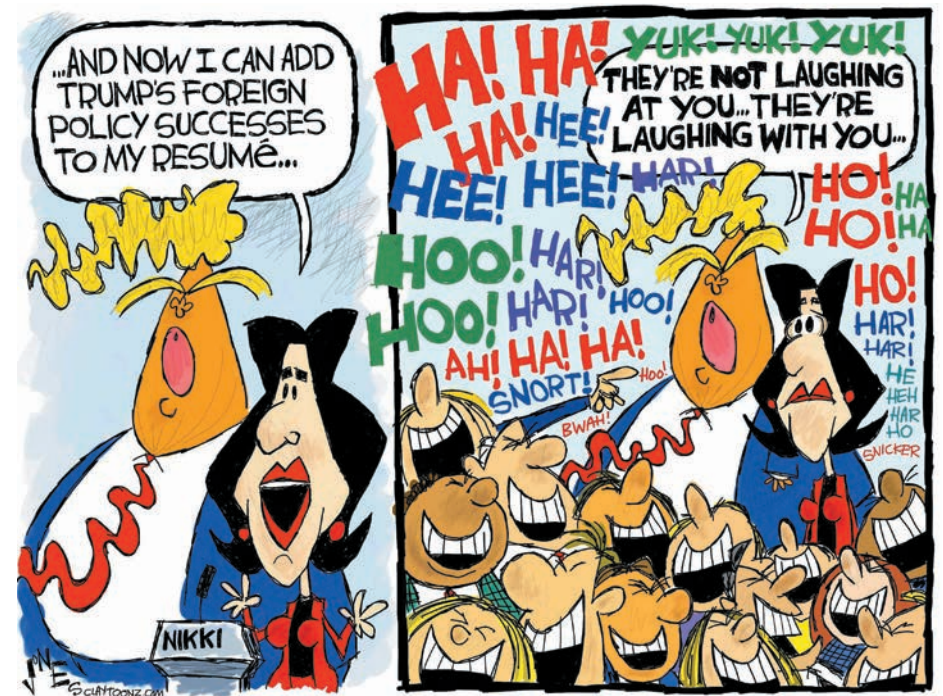

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): In 1962, when she was 31 years old, Sagittarian actress Rita Moreno won an Academy Award for her role in the film West Side Story. In 2018, she attended the Oscars again, sporting the same dress she’d worn for the ceremony 56 years before. I think the coming weeks will be a great time for you, too, to reprise a splashy event or two from the past. You’ll generate soul power by reconnecting with your roots. You’ll tonify and harmonize your mental health by establishing a symbolic link with your earlier self.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The Committee to Reward Unsung Good Deeds hereby acknowledges your meritorious service in the trenches of the daily routine. We praise your tireless efforts to make life less chaotic and more coherent for everyone around you. We’re grateful for the patience and poise you demonstrate as you babysit adults who act like children. And we are gratified by your capacity to keep long-term projects on track in the face of trivial diversions and petty complaints. I know it’s a lot to ask, but could you please intensify your vigilance in the next three weeks? We need your steadiness more than ever.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You need a special pep talk that’s best provided by Aquarian poet Audre Lorde. Please meditate on these four quotes by her. 1. “Caring for myself is not self-indulgence, it is self-preservation. 2. “We have been raised to fear the yes within ourselves, our deepest cravings.” 3. “You cannot use someone else’s fire. You can only use your own. To do that, you must first be willing to believe you have it.” 4. “Nothing I accept about myself can be used against me to diminish me.” 5. “The learning process is something you can literally incite, like a riot.”

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Warning: My horoscopes may interfere with your ability to rationalize your delusions; they could extinguish your enthusiasm for clichés; they might cause you to stop repressing urges that you really should express; and they may influence you to cultivate the state of awareness known as “playful wisdom.” Do you really want to risk being exposed to such lavish amounts of inner freedom? If not, you should stop reading now. But if you’re as ripe for emancipating adventures as I think you are, then get started on shedding any attitudes and influences that might dampen your urge to romp and cavort and carouse. ●

The petition for probate requests that PAUL GIROUX be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. Said sale will be held, but without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession, condition, or encumbrances, including fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by said Deed of Trust, to pay the remaining principal sums of the note(s) secured by said Deed of Trust. The undersigned or its predecessor caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property.

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (844) 477-7869 or visit this Internet Web site WWW.STOXPOSTING.COM, using the file number assigned to this case 063189-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. FOR SALES INFORMATION: (844) 477-7869 CLEAR RECON CORP 4375 Jutland Drive San Diego, California 92117

The tax-defaulted properties listed on this notice are subject to the Tax Collector's power of sale and have been approved for sale by a resolution dated August 28th, 2018 of the Humboldt County Board of Supervisors.

The sale will be conducted at www.bid4assets.com, from November 16th through November 19th, 2018 as a public auction to the highest bidder for not less than the minimum bid as shown on this notice. Terms of payment are limited to wire transfers, certified checks or money orders. A California transfer tax will be added to and collected with the purchase price and is calculated at $.55 per each $500 or fraction thereof.

All property is sold as is. The county and its employees are not liable for the failure of any electronic equipment that may prevent a person from participating in the sale.

If the properties are sold, parties of interest, as defined in California Revenue and Taxation Code Section 4675, have a right to file a claim with the county for any excess proceeds from the sale. Excess proceeds are the amount of the highest bid in excess of the liens and costs of the sale that are paid from the sale proceeds. Notice will be given to parties of interest, pursuant to California Revenue Taxation Code section 3692(e), if excess proceeds result from the sale.

Connections Quiz

By Barry Evans

fieldnotes@northcoastjournal.com

Short attention span? Perfect, we understand each other. Each of these “connections” will take no more than 18 seconds to read. That’s supposed to be the average duration of our short-term memories — good for copying down a phone number, hopeless (in my case) for remembering the name of someone I’ve just been introduced to. If you want to challenge yourself, keep a piece of paper over each answer until you’ve given it a whirl.

What’s the connection between novelist James Joyce and physicist Murray Gell-Mann?

Quarks, which usually come in threes, are the fundamental constituents of matter according to the theory developed by Gell-Mann and (independently) by George Zweig in 1964. Gell-Mann happened upon Joyce’s wordplay in Finnegan’s Wake, “Three quarks for Muster Mark” (three quarts for Mister Mark), and the word stuck.

Between Eugene Cernan and Mary Shelley?

The Last Man is the title of a novel published by Mary Shelley, author of Frankenstein, in 1826. Cernan was the last man on the moon, 1972.

Between the words “mausoleum” and “colossal?”

The Seven Wonders of the World. The original mausoleum (350 B.C.), one of the seven wonders, was the tomb built for Carian king, Mausolus, in present-day Bodrum, Turkey. Another wonder is the Colossus of Rhodes (305 B.C.), a huge statue of the sun god built in Greece’s Rhodes harbor.

Between Everest and Chimborazo?

Highest mountains on Earth: Mount

Everest is highest above sea level, while the peak of Chimborazo (in Ecuador) is the point farthest from our planet’s center. (Blame Earth’s equatorial bulge.)

Between Hephaestus and Mr. Spock?

Vulcan. The Greek god of fire Hephaestus is Roman Vulcan (hence the word volcano), while Mr. Spock hails from planet Vulcan.

Between the author of I Kings 7:23 and William Shanks?

The wrong value for pi. The Old Testament verse implies a value of exactly 3, while Shanks published a value to 707 decimal places in 1873. His error in the 527th place was only discovered in 1945.

Between astronomers Fred Hoyle and John Wheeler, etymologically speaking?

A popular astronomical phrase. Wheeler coined “black hole;” Hoyle came up with “Big Bang.”

Between Mars and fashion designer Elsa Schiaparelli?

Giovanni Schiaparelli, the couturier’s uncle, claimed to have seen “canali” (mistranslated as “canals” rather than “channels”) on Mars in 1877, prompting the American Percival Lowell to build Flagstaff observatory to search for evidence of intelligent life on that planet.

Between Ferdinand de Lesseps and George Goethals?

Canals. They were chief architects of the Suez and Panama canals, respectively.

Barry Evans (barryevans9@yahoo.com) will change the spelling to “connexions” when he rules the world.

Clendenen's Cider Works

Clendenen's
Cider Works
LOCAL APPLES

99¢ LB

Clendenen's Cider Works has been a Fortuna staple since 1909, providing Humboldt County with a wide variety of apples as well as 100% natural, pure, unpasteurized apple cider. Originally purchased by Ernest Clifton and May Long Clendenen, the five acre parcel is now run by the third and forth generation of Clendenen's. Clif and his son Drew continue the tradition, making the same cider with the same trees.

Clendenen's also delivers throughout Humboldt County during the apple harvest season. This includes many local grocery stores and even local schools and afterschool programs.

For more information about Clendenen's Cider Works, including contact information and a very nice history of the family and area, you can go to their website clendenensciderworks.com. Also make sure to visit their farm stand and see why the Clendenens say it is the best glass of cider that you'll ever taste. The Clendenen family would also like to thank the people of Humboldt County for their continued support and look forward to serving Humboldt County in the future.
